Please answer the following questions, but exclude anyone who is wanted after failing to answer police bail.

As of today (29-03-18) and with regards to your police force:

How many people are currently on police bail?

775 people are currently on live bail i.e. their bail is still valid. When people are released on bail they are given a specific date to return to answer bail so once that date has passed their bail date has expired. If they have been given bail and have not yet answered it because that date has not yet come then they are on 'live' bail awaiting the date when they are due to come in.

Of these, what is the longest period from the date of arrest to the present day?

817 days

For how many people on police bail is this period (from the date of arrest to today) more than:

28 days = 209

Three months = 102

One year = 92

How many people are currently released under investigation?

There are 1,869 current active released pending investigation records.

Of these, what is the longest period from the date of arrest to the present day?

For how many people currently released under investigation is this period (from the date of arrest to today) more than:

One year

Two years

Three years

'Released Pending Investigation' came into force in April 2017 and there are 2 records which have just recently gone over the 1 year period.
